Now stand in position again. Drop the left arm to the side. Bring it around in a semicircle, throwing the shoulder with it, beeping the arm almost rigid and turning the forearm so the back of the knuckles will strike the bag. This is a left-arm swing and can be delivered with terrific force.

Do the same with the right. Then alternately, allowing the bag to hit the sides of the ring three or perhaps four times between your blows.

Judging direction and distance in such a move are not as easy as you may think. Much depends on hitting the bag at the proper angle and at the proper time. It should be hit as it is swinging toward you and while it is as nearly in the centre of the ring as possible.
